OUR GRIEVANCES.

We have reason to believe that the fact of our having found it necessary in the course of our duty to the true interests of the people to discountenance what strongly savors of professional agitation, has been perverted into an intention on your part to abandon the attempt to try and obtain redress of grievances. We think that under these circumstances it may be well once more to explain our position. At the outset we may say that agitation may be divided into two kinds—legitimate and illegitimate. The just intention of legitimate agitation seems to be to obtain redress of any grievance of a public nature, which all the attendant circumstances being weighed, would seem susceptible of more speedy consideration than it receives and in this we would include the granting of all rights and privileges wrongfully withheld from the people. Any constitutional agitation having such ends in view has our most hearty sympathy and may depend on our support, nor when we review our conduct with respect to such cases, can we understand any honest man refusing to believe in this assurance. We cannot recall a single instance in which we have refused to ventilate a grievance, held to be such by the bulk of the community, so far from this, sometime ago we felt it necessary to commence our articles upon such subjects with some sort of apology for hammering with such persistence upon the same nails. As we happen at present to be the only journalists in this place, we feel that it behooves us in the discharge of our public trust to act with the greatest caution. We think the reason of our having for some time discontinued writing up the subject of grievances may easily be seen by all who will take the trouble to try for themselves. Having drawn attention to such grievances as were brought under our notice we gave want we considered the best advice to the public, viz.: to embody their wants in the form of a petition, couched in firm but respectful language, and signed without exception by every one interested. We further ventured to advise that in order to secure attention to a petition of this nature the people should divide the expense of sending to Ottawa to present it one or two delegates, to be men really enough and sufficiently versed in our requirements to hold their own in conversation with the authorities there. Whether in consequence of our advice or not we understand that a petition of this kind is being generally signed, but until we are favored with a sight of its contents, we are not in a position to express any opinion about it, nor do we see that there is any use in harping in the meanwhile upon such subjects as we presume will be contained in it. Should the subjects of the petition be legitimate we will gladly do our best in its support, but we would be sorry to pledge ourselves to encourage the harassment of any government, whether Conservative or Liberal, at the dictation of such men, as in every country are to be found, purely from personal and selfish motives trying to make tools of the people in the hope that by upsetting whatever may be the existing order of things, something may turn up to their private advantage. We remember that the development and management of our vast territory is a herculean task, so much so that the problem has not yet been solved with regard to the comparatively old Province of Manitoba. We further remember that great things have been done, that Cabinet Ministers are personally visiting the Territories to distinguish the real wishes of the people, that the Government cannot help the interference of natural causes with the consummation of the over sanguine hopes of individuals, and that if we lend ourselves in the hope of temporary popularity to meaningless threatenings, which excite the amusement of the initiated and the fears only of capitalists who would develop the country, we are betraying the people, who sooner or later will turn and curse all those who have misled them. By all means let us know of all substantial grievances and we will work with all our might for their redress in every legitimate way, but to professional agitators we will have nothing to say, especially after the result of the Farmers' Union.

The enter of the MANITOBA WEEKLY FREE PRESS upon its thirtieth year of publication will be marked by the most liberal offer yet made to intending subscribers.

Two Dollars, ten cents postage paid, will be accepted as full payment from any time hereon on, and the paper will be given to those who subscribe at once, and a second third of a year or absolutely nothing.

This is an offer which it is confidently expected will be availed of by several of the leading newspapers of the West, and the Territories, especially in view of the important character of this season.

The Weekly Free Press from the inception held the lead in North-West journalism, and for the past year has received a larger circulation than any other weekly paper in the Territories and Territories combined.

Last year the week's circulation was advanced, which will hereafter be regularly maintained, and the subscription list fairly numbered, the fact that at the present time it is safe to say the Manitoba Weekly Free Press has a larger circulation, in proportion to the population of its country, than any other paper in Canada.

The reasons for this are many and varied, and it is not possible to do justice to them in a brief notice, but it is sufficient to say that the paper is a valuable and interesting one, and it is safe to say that the Manitoba Weekly Free Press has a larger circulation, in proportion to the population of its country, than any other paper in Canada.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Medicine Hat to Mount Laggan.

Leaving Medicine Hat for the West the train passes over the beautiful and substantial iron bridge which spans the River Saskatchewan, and laboriously ascends the long steep gradient on the north bank of the river until the level prairie is reached. Onward to Crowfoot the line passes over some level ground, and at other times gently rolling prairie, while here and there an occasional small lake or pond, helps to break the monotony of the aspect. Here let me state that what struck me much was, that while between Moose Jaw and Medicine Hat, the prairie grass presented a dried and shrivelled appearance, the land from Medicine Hat to the Mountains had a fresh green look, highly suggestive of the power of the country for stock-raising. In truth I expect that in a few years "Alberta" will become one of the greatest stock-raising countries in the world. At Crowfoot, there is a beautiful creek fringed with lush, fringing a delightful valley below the prairie level. Here to the north of the line a settler has made his home, and from the appearance of the compact farm buildings and the well tilled fields of corn and wheat, he seems to have found prosperity in this lovely though lonely spot. From Crowfoot to Glenora there is a continuation of the above mentioned prairie. Glenora is a very small place, although the railway company have a good station and round house; still a station house and a few small shacks constitute the entire town. The C. P. R. experimental farm here is a great success, in fact being the best, the wheat having grown to an average height of from four feet to four feet six inches, with a heavy head; while oats are anything higher; turnips, cabbage, tomatoes, pumpkins, melons, etc., are a superior crop, although the late frost has injured some of them a little. Gently rolling prairie is still the feature of the country until Calgary is reached. Near to Strathmore there is a very large stock ranch, managed by Major General Band Strang. On our journey thus far we passed several groups of Blackfoot Indians. I will say very little about Calgary as I observed very little and had no inductive account of it, in one of the back issues of your valuable paper. But one thing I must observe is, the striking difference between Calgary of today, and the Calgary of a year or two ago. A handsome new town on the west side of the river has superseded old Calgary in the shade of the old frontier looking collection of log huts, which was once the distinguishing feature of Calgary. The new town has a bright, airy, splendid looking trip. All the way the railroad follows the windings of the broad, rapid running Bow River, crossing it many a time before Laggan is reached, and the beautiful stream with verdant clad banks, gleamed refreshing to eyes, dulled by prairie monotony, and hungering for the sight of timber and change of scene. "Change of scene it is now with a vengeance." Leaving Calgary, the day being clear and bright, and rained by the bluffs on the first level of the river, we got our first peep of the Rocky Mountains. As they appeared in the distance their ruggedly marked forms outlined against the sky, clad with snow, and shining in the sun, they looked like immense icebergs at sea, their white gleaming looking being made more intense by the contrast with the green foot hills beneath them. On our way we passed a small farm, but the crop of barley and oats had not come to maturity, and several houses were rearing on the strip, but all round hay making has been successfully carried out, as can be seen by the great number of stacks and ricks all through the valley. From Calgary to Kananaskis the line passes through the broad river valley, the foot hills of the Mountains rising on each side, some of them clad in their summit with trees. At Collingwood we passed the celebrated Chebania Ranch, but were disappointed in not seeing any of the cattle herds, however, we saw numerous large herds of horses belonging to the Ranch. At Kananaskis the train was brought to a stop in order to allow the passengers an opportunity of seeing the Falls of the Kananaskis River. They are a fine sight, the river tumbling down in great volume and velocity, over larger rocky shelves, and then sheer down through a gap in the living rock, to the level of the river below. A photographer belonging to the party tried hard to take a photograph of the Falls, but he failed, owing to the impossibility of keeping the instrument steady, the action of the wind through the gap being a feature of the place. On again entering the car the day being Sunday, the Rev. Gavin Lang of Inverness, Scotland, conducted service in the Pullman, when he preached a very impressive discourse, suited for the place and occasion. At Kananaskis the Mountains present a solid front, showing no sign whatever of the beautiful valley we are so shortly to enter. Midway between Kananaskis and the gap, we plunge, as it seems, headlong between high peaks and enter the real valley of the Bow. On every side are the gigantic masses of the rocky mountains and looking at them one can hardly comprehend their immense size. The thick forests of fir that reach far up their sides, struggling on stony, until frost and snow compel them to stop, seem like fields of green grass, indeed it is almost painful to think they are trees you are looking at. When the locomotive whistles the echoes are repeated again and again, from peak to peak, until the sound is lost in the far distance. At Dufur the valley seems hermetically closed in by the vast circle of snow-capped peaks. Midway, after ascending, in never failing succession continue all the route, Silver City, 99 miles from Calgary, is a pretty little town of about eighty log houses and huts; overhead the Mountains tower into the sky, while all around is a dense forest of pine trees. As I did not leave the cars I cannot give an account of its stores, etc., but from the train, I observed a big bayard in full blast, while the names of the Mounts House, Castle Park Hotel, and Queens Hotel, stared at me from signboards at these respective places. From what I hear the Mounts House is the best hotel. On the south side of the river, for about fifteen miles west from here, the ground is very rich in copper and silver ore, and preparations are being made by several wealthy American prospectors for mining to be commenced on a large scale. One American gentleman from Montana, interested in mines both there and here, said that the immense quantity of copper here would soon cast into the shade the best mines in Montana. Leaving Silver City, and until we reach Mount Laggan, grand, picturesque mountain views follow each other, like the pictures in a panorama. Mount Laggan, 35 miles from Winnipeg, as a town, brings before me the memory of the old pioneer towns of the United States. It is composed of a number of solid looking log shanties, several hotels; the principal ones being Morrison's Royal Hotel, and the Queen of the West, owned by Mr. West. Here to my surprise I got the best meals I have ever received in any place out of Winnipeg, at the moderate rate of fifty cents for each man. This should put to shame the various railroad dining halls between Winnipeg and the Mountains, the provision of which are not very particular in either the quality of, or the manner they serve the meals to the hungry exhausted traveller. The principal stores belong to Cousins & Scratched, general merchants; A. F. Feland, general merchant; and Mr. B. B. Hill, hardware; who has his principal business quarters in Medicine Hat. There is also a post office and bookstore combined. I was very much amused by seeing a very little tent, used not for the usual size made, with the imposing sign "G. Gray, Fashionable Tailor." The idea of fashion in the Mountains fairly amazed me. Immense piles of lumber, cordwood, and railway material, to be used in the construction of the line, are lying all round, and the continual unloading and loading of the supplies for the construction give the place a look of real business activity. From falling in the Bow River and its tributary streams, is a never failing source of delight to the immense number of tourists continually coming and going here. The scenery round Laggan is expressively grand. The broad valley, clad with a forest of trees; the crystal clear and rapid running Bow River; the immense masses of the Mountains, their tops being lost in the clouds; make a picture so grand, so majestic, that its memory will survive in the legends of those who have had the fortune to gaze on it for a lifetime.

COMMUNICATIONS.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the views expressed by correspondents to the Editor of The Times.

Sir, I wish through the medium of your paper to call the attention of certain residents of the west end to the necessity of their exercising a little more judgment in the use of fire arms than they have done lately. It has not been safe for the past few nights to pass a certain residence, the occupant of which is, amongst other things, a magistrate, without running the risk of receiving the full benefit of a charge of shot, which might perhaps have been innocently intended for some unfortunate Indian dog. It is well known that some very valuable dogs have been shot at the same residence lately and it is only natural to suppose that this has been done with the full knowledge and consent of the "Lord of the Manor." However that may be, it is to be hoped that the offending parties will be more careful in the future, and if they feel inclined to a little shooting that they will be careful not to endanger the lives of people passing on the road. If this is not done the "strong arm of the law" will have to be invoked in order to remedy the evil and bring any offenders to justice. SALUS.

READING ROOM.

It seems probable that the agricultural society will have the use of the building for their show which was occupied last year as the reading room of the Young Men's Literary Association, and it now becomes a matter demanding immediate consideration, as to what will become under the circumstances of the property of the Association at present in the building. What is every one's business is of course no one's business, but if there are no trustees of the society surely such members of the originally appointed committee as may still be here, ought to meet and consider what steps should be taken for the protection of the property in the meanwhile and the revival of the society this coming winter. It will certainly be a most disgraceful thing should the society which worked so well and was so handsomely provided with literature and other necessities be allowed to lapse, from lack of interest on the part of the public. There certainly is no such superfluity of good healthy improving forms of recreation here, as to justify indifference.
